The Choice Are Few

The construction plans for which the National Railways are seeking approval of Parliament call for the building of only three short lines in Alberta: a cut-off from Clover Bar to Bretona, a 19-mile extension of the St. Paul line, and a branch from Edmonton to Bonny castle. For a three-year construction program that does not include the building of any new earthworks and is the more conservative because new branches and extensions are planned in Saskatchewan. At least the Senate will have trouble to find an Alberta project that it can kill with any show of justification.

The Weed Tax

Hon. George Housley got into trouble with the Government of Alberta when he tried to empower weed inspectors to order a farmer to destroy a crop of grain which was notably infested with sow thistle, Canada thistle or bunt lettuce. The minister of agriculture, Mr. H. C. G. Smith, who is a strong advocate of the weed tax, said he would not get rid of the sow thistle and to eradicate the Canadian variety or the lettuce. They were probably right in declining to carry weed destruction just yet to that drastic point. But the Minister deserves credit at least for his stand in the fight against the weed tax, rather than not for it. Alberta farmer can be saved more money by the extermination of weeds than he is at all likely to save through any reduction in freight rates. That fact is unquestionable, and it ought never to be forgotten.

A New Book About Canada

The Royal Bank of Canada has published, and is distributing a hand book entitled: "Canada and the Twentieth Century," which is notable alike for its appearance and for the valuable information it contains. The book is excellently arranged and printed on good paper, and is bound in durable covers. Every alternate page is occupied by photographs, many of them full page, which present a panorama of Canadian scenery and activities.

The reading matter has been prepared by the economists of the bank, is accurate, up-to-date, comprehensive and well condensed. The wide range covered by the reviewers is indicated by the headings under which the information is arranged; climate and agriculture, oil, mining, manufacturing, new industries, power production, foreign trade, forest industries, mining and mineral resources, fisheries, the banks and banking system, the provinces of Canada, the playground of the world, transportation and ports, the British Empire, preferences, the tariff, trade with the British West Indies, tariff agreements with foreign countries, Canada as a field for investment, Government and finance, currency, present taxes.

Mr. St. John's is most attractive, is bound to awaken interest and add much to those who have it. It is a good and informative text book for Canadians who wish to refresh their memories and broaden their knowledge concerning the vast country which we call our own.

A Matter For Parliament

Premier Brownie has protested to Ottawa against the passing of a bill which would take out of the hands of the Minister of the Interior the authority to dispose of natural resources lying within the Dominion parks. If the bill becomes law it will in future be possible to obtain leases of land within a timber limit, or a water power in any of the parks except through a special act of Parliament.

That change will in no way prejudicially affect any legitimate claim of the Province in respect of the Spray Lakes, which is the issue out of which the protest arises. There is no point nor purpose in the objection raised here, for the thought that the minister might be induced or intimidated into giving up Provincial authorities control over the Spray Lakes site on conditions which Parliament would not accept as sufficient.

But if the control sought by the Government is to be one which Parliament will not conceder, what right would there be in asking of legislation? What right has the Minister of the Interior to dispose of natural resources in the control without consulting Parliament? If the case of the Province is not strong enough to get a special act through Parliament, how would the Minister justify himself to Parliament and the public if he extended a lease under discretionary powers given to him through administrative purposes?

This protest is in substance and fact an infringement in Dominion affairs such as the Premier would resent if it were attempted by the Federal authorities in respect to Provincial affairs. The Dominion parks and all that they contain belong to the people of Canada. Parliament is charged with the sole responsibility of securing the best possible use of this Dominion property as will be in the interests of the owners, having in mind the special purpose for which the parks were set aside.

Whether Parliament chooses to discharge that duty by giving broad powers of discretion to the Minister in charge, or to narrow down that his authority and keep to itself the question of whether and how far the resources in the parks shall be developed, is a matter which Parliament must decide, and with which no provincial authority has any right to meddle.

By EDGAR A. GUEST

I had a friend who died and he left me his will. That was all I knew. That was all he left in the world above. He made his will.

He took me through my natural life. He guided me through the will. To the end he was there. He died. Both for his daughter and his son.

I have my money to invest. And though I try my best, I can't get it done. My judgment is criticized.

His widow, once so calm and meek, comes, hot with rage, three times a week. She is not a widow, she is a widow.

His children hate the sight of me. Although their friend I've tried to be, I interfere with their inheritance.

Now when I die I'll never ask A friend to carry such a task. I'll leave him all such anguish now. And leave a hired caterer.

Why Lincoln Was Great
By DR. FRANK CRANE

Everybody knows that Lincoln was great, but there is one reason that effort to secure recognition for that Lincoln was great, however, simply because he was Lincoln.

That was the apotheosis of the common man. That was the common man.

He could not play the piano like Chopin, could not read Greek like Gladstone, nor was he a great warrior or commander like Napoleon.

He simply had common sense and brought it to the common man. He was a link of intelligence which you and I are a measure possess.

He was not a handsome man, but he was like the man of whom the prophet speaks, "without form or comeliness." His figure was ungainly and his face was wrinkled.

He was told by his men that when he was a boy he had a gun and he had a hunting gun at him and pointed his gun at him.

"Hold on there," said Abe. "What are you doing?"

The hunter replied, "I made a solemn vow to my mother upon her death bed that I never would shoot a gun again." Lincoln, after hearing such a story, said, "I'll never shoot again."

Just as Napoleon and Alexander were not tall, so Lincoln was not a handsome man. The secret of his greatness was not his physical appearance.

He was told that when he was a boy he had a rifle and he had a hunting gun at him and pointed his gun at him.

"Hold on there," said Abe. "What are you doing?"

The hunter replied, "I made a solemn vow to my mother upon her death bed that I never would shoot a gun again."

Mrs. T. D. Fitzsimon Heads Conservative Women's Club

Annual Meeting of Association Held on Monday Evening

The greatest asset to a club in course is unity and organization alike in prosperity. Mrs. T. D. Fitzsimon, elected president of the Edmonton Women's Conservative Association told that organization Monday evening, following the election of officers in the Y. W. C. A. room.

While the Conservatives of the city met with adversity by their recent defeat in the election, this was not a permanent state of affairs. It was only to mean that she declared.

"This, too, shall pass away." Public opinion, she said, was with the speaker averted, urging renewed effort on the part of the members of the association to achieve future achievement.

Mr. McCollum, president of the Conservative Association, outlined the plan of organization being adopted by his club, which has adopted a national campaign.

A comprehension of the work done by the Women's Conservative Association during the past year was given in the report submitted by the secretary, Mrs. T. A. Mercer, who was re-elected.

The following officers were elected at the annual meeting: Mrs. M. A. McMillin, honorary first vice-president, Mrs. C. Y. Weaver, honorary second vice-president, Mrs. D. M. Duggan, honorary third vice-president, Mrs. E. D. Fitzsimon, first vice-president, Mrs. Rose Beaumont, second vice-president, Mrs. E. Spratt, third vice-president, Mrs. E. Beaumont, secretary, Mrs. J. Marshall, treasurer, Mrs. J. Marshall.

Officers of committees appointed to work on the campaign: Mrs. E. Beaumont, publicity, entertainment and educational committee, Mrs. Rose Beaumont.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

GARRITTE FOLSON is stabbed to death while swimming at the beach. The police believe that the death weapon was a pug-ah, an Oriental knife, and that it was used on the victim.

Folson's bathing companions have been Roger NEILER, a brawny partner; MARY HELEN BARNARD, a blonde; and RONALDA VALDON.

ANNE FOLSON, eccentric and masterful sister of the dead man, takes command and it is established that one CHEDDON STONE is a fencer of curiously warped ideas. He is known for buying two knives but not the sheath.

Anastasia, engaged to TITUS RIGGS, an architect, arrives and is pursued by the three women dolls in his uncle's room.

CLIFFORD STONE, famous detective, has seen him that Folson had been killed. He has seen him and he had lied at the inquest, but he has not been able to determine the identity of the killer.

CARMELITA VALDON, who pushes him.

Stone comes upon Carmelita. Valdon, who is engaged to a man who has interested her, and determines to question her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER LIV
"Not going in this morning?" Stone said. After Peltor, who was with him, had gone.

"Not until later," Carmelita Valdon told him. "About noon, I think, today."

"Then you've got a chair for a while. I'll take care of you. You're lonely and come for a ride. The chairs fascinate me and I hate to go alone."

It was not the habit of Carmelita Valdon to seek the company and share of attention from any person, especially a man. And Fleming Stone was decidedly prepossessing.

She smiled on him and dashed off to the beach to go swimming.

"See you when I come back," she said gallantly. "I'll be back."

"See you when I come back," he said with a smile and a nod, and then glanced at Carmelita.

"I'm not going to go to you," he said in his gentle voice, so full of the soft, fleshy, amorous, personal, too.

"Yes," she said slowly, "everybody but I."

"And Fate is cruel."

"The beach is rolling along the boardwalk, the sun hot yet high enough to be uncomfortable, the breezes in rags and torn and the stolid half-sleep negro guard who had been dozing had he could hear their conversation.

"Yes, Mr. Stone," and Carmelita turned a grave countenance to his own, as though she were a crone or a woman.

"It's a sweeping question! And what an untrue one! Surely you don't mean that, you, with all the gifts nature can bestow."

"It's the man who have—have you—say—many gifts, looks, charm, all the feminine arts, who can afford to offend, get the cruel blows from the world."
